FISHERS FEAR MONSTER EEL

Giant Deep-Sea Reptile Attacks Mon as Well as Destroying the Shellfish.

Fishermen not only hate the monster muraena—they four him. Ha robs the sea of shallfish and other inhabitants that the haharmon would him to leave for their nets. In nddiffion, he isn't backward about at-tacking a fisherman now and then. This hold outlaw received as name from the Romans.

The muraena is a deep-sea cel. Il is weapons of attack are two rows of sharp teeth, strong enough to crush the hard-shelled fish on which he feeds. They range in size from snakelike creatures, about a foot long, in the Mediterranean, to monsters six and eight feet long.

These giants the fisherman fears, for they will attack him either in or out of the water. Their bodies are spotted or decorated in varied colors.

For the most part these cels inhabit seas in the tropic or temperate zones, but a few will ascend rivers where there are tides.

REALLY CALL OF THE WILD

The Housewife, monthly

Physician Describes Spring Fever Feeling as Return of Primitive Impulse in Man.

Spring fever is not a disease, but an expression of a desire to chuck one's job and answer the call to the wild, according to Dr. W. A. Sawyer, secretary of the California state board of health.

"Whether man is descended from a monkey or from Adam and Eve, who roamed about the Garden of Eden. there is that inherent longing to play and bask in the sun when spring first appears," said Doctor Sawyer, "It is certain that our forefathers, whether man or monkey, used to celebrate the opening of spring by lazily basking in the sun, and it is that longing on our part to do likewise. which we call spring fever."

PASSPORT TO THE FRONT.

The only passport to the front which it not fraught with a thousand difficulties is a simple little telegram. With it a woman-it is nearly always a woman-can leave London, get aboard ship, pass through Boulogne, and arrive at the front without any other document, the London Chronicle states. But it is not a passport that any woman would wish to have, for that little telegram is sent only to the relative of some soldier abroad who is dangerously ill.

The church army has a special branch which looks after the woman who receives the sad summons. The army sisters meet her in London; she stays the night, if need be, in one of their homes. She is escorted to the train for the front, and is met at Boulogne. She gets to the base hospital, and then her dear boy sees her and smiles happily, and, perhaps, re-ceives his last promotion. But very often these dangerous cases recover, and there are joyous hours before the journey home is made.
